information leaked by “Vittorio’s” resentful fellow far-right activists, who tend to get paranoid about new recruits rising too quickly through their ranks, we are exposing his real identity today as Kim Warner Costello, an extremely violent member of the Proud Boys hate group who works at Gearheads Motorworks, an automotive repair business owned by his partner in the Montavilla neighborhood of Portland, OR.

In addition to being a member of the Proud Boys, Costello has been seen running with Haley Adams and her “PDX Crew,” and has been documented assaulting activists in downtown Portland, as well as making numerous death threats online.

Introducing Kim Costello

Likely drawn by predictions of violence and inflammatory rhetoric by Joey Gibson and his followers, Costello began to engage with Patriot Prayer content on Facebook in the weeks prior to Joey Gibson’s August 4th, 2018 rally in downtown Portland. The event ultimately drew hundreds of racists, white nationalists, neo-Nazis, and fascists from across the US, but they were confronted by Portland area residents and activists who easily outnumbered Patriot Prayer’s contingent. Costello nonetheless befriended members of the local Proud Boys chapter in particular, and subsequently began accompanying them to events like the Oregon State Fair and vintage automobile shows. Within a short period of time, he had officially joined that White Nationalist group.

PUGET SOUND ANARCHISTS

In early September, 2018 Costello begins referring to himself as a Proud Boy while showing off a set of bladed brass knuckles.

Costello posts a video of himself participating in the Proud Boys “second degree” cereal-naming ritual administered by Oregon Proud Boys members Jacob “JD” Stockton (Portland), Matteo Angelo Dagradi (Beaverton), Jason Michael James (Portland), and Niles Douglas Gregory (Hillsboro). Fellow Proud Boy Tusitala “Tiny” Toese can be seen in the comments expressing suspicion and dismay Costello’s induction was overseen without his authorization.

October 13, 2018

As Fox News’ fixation on a viral video of activists re-directing traffic around a vigil for a black man murdered by Portland Police provoked a national wave of far-right resentment, Joey Gibson saw a clear opportunity to capitalize politically, and called for a “Flash march for Law and Order in PDX” on October 13, 2018.

During that march, Kim Costello eagerly engaged in vicious and aggressive assaults, chasing and tackling multiple Portland residents in order to beat them with a collapsible baton and then stomp on them when they fell to the ground. At one point in the evening, Haley Adams briefly interviewed Costello on her livestream, saying that he had made the large “REPLACE PDX MAYOR” banner that far-right activists had displayed at the beginning of their assaults.

Some Context for this Map

Wearing a yellow flag face mask, Kim Warner Costello chases, tackles, and assaults Portland activists. He is seen here hitting someone in the back with a metal baton, and also stomping on someone who has fallen to the ground.

The Proud Boys hate group incentivizes aggressive assaults in its founding by-laws, bestowing a “fourth degree” on members who commit assault against anyone they consider to be an anti-fascist activist (a loosely-defined category which, in their eyes, tends to include anyone who doesn’t publicly declare allegiance to Donald Trump).

PUGET SOUND ANARCHISTS

the organization's members, and as a result, they actively seek out opportunities to assault people. Shortly after he was filmed aggressively assaulting Portland residents, Kim Costello got a "fourth degree" tattoo on his hand.

Disagreements and Drama

In January of 2019, Patriot Prayer’s proto-fascist followers began showing up at various union, leftist, and anarchist spaces in order to harass and threaten the Portlanders who gathered there. This pattern escalated with the vandalism of community spaces and businesses by Patriot Prayer members in the early hours of January 24, 2019, as well as Joey Gibson’s initiation of a series of flagrant assaults which he, Steve Patrick Drury, and other Patriot Prayer followers perpetrated against Portland residents under the guise of “de-masking” them. Gibson’s campaign– a euphemism for assault– proved controversial even among his most steadfast followers. Kim Costello objected too, but his reasoning revealed that he was still adhering to Gibson’s earlier instructions that his followers should attempt to infiltrate, blend in with, and frame anti-fascist activists. Costello doesn’t so much disagree with Gibson’s plan to assault and “de-mask” activists, he just doesn’t want to be summarily assaulted by Patriot Prayer’s violent members.

(Left, in comments) Kim Costello argues with Russell Schultz about the wisdom of assaulting people who are wearing masks and reveals that he attempts to infiltrate groups of activists using black bloc tactics. (Right) Violent Patriot Prayer member Chris Ponte encourages assault against Portland activists, and Kim Costello defends his right to frame them in order to incite far-right violence.

filled with committed anti-fascists who would have no problem chasing him off. On the final day of “Rock Against Fascism,” a new Proud Boys splinter group called “Deathgrip,” apparently spearheaded by Costello, made several appearances around the Portland metro area to wave flags and hold another of Costello’s poorly-designed banners. In witless defiance of Joey Gibson’s supposedly city-wide “de-masking” decree, members of the group covered their faces for the demonstrations. Embarrassingly, local television station KATU provided “Deathgrip” with a platform for their incoherent, anti-gun-control posturing, by giving Kim Costello (using the pseudonym “V”) an on-camera interview.

Russell Schultz: You know i'm talking to you... You are a psycho and you need to get out of the fucking movement. If you're afraid of being doxed, get out of the fucking movement... you're a cancer. Very shortly after Russell aired his grievances, Tiny Toese made a post in which he conspicuously put forward somewhat exaggerated and compensatory public support for "Vittorio DiNove," aka Kim Costello, indicating that Costello had been the subject of controversy.
